

Amateurs Respond To Appalachian Flooding

Appalachian amateurs this week responded to assist after heavy rains caused flooding in several states in the region. Flooding closed numerous roads, damaged or destroyed many structures, forced residents from their homes and was blamed for at least seven deaths. In Kentucky, ARRL Section Emergency Coordinator Ron Dodson, KA4MAP, says the Red Cross asked amateurs to assist with damage assessment in Knox County. According to press reports, hundreds of homes and businesses were flooded out as heavy rain spread throughout the eastern part of the state after earlier affecting the Harlan area. The Salvation Army also has responded to assist.

The National Weather Service issued flood warnings for Carroll and Owen counties where the Kentucky River had overflowed following up to four inches of rain March 19. Flooding also forced Morehead State University to close March 20 after more than four inches of rain fell there. Emergency declarations were issued in at least eight counties and five cities in Kentucky. No Amateur Radio Emergency Service

(ARES) and Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service (RACES) activations were reported.

In extreme Southwest Virginia, heavy rain over the March 16-17 weekend swelled streams and rivers beyond flood stage, reportedly covering highways and sweeping away some bridges and forcing more than 1000 residents to flee their homes. ARES and RACES teams were called up March 17 to staff the Scott County Emergency Operations Center.

"Many major highways were under water for a period of time, and quite a few secondary roads are still impassable," Scott County EC Jimmy Flanary, K4GV, reported. Although shelters were set up, most people refused evacuation, he said, opting instead to stay with friends or relatives. ARRL District 14 Emergency Coordinator Phil Mohon, KU4RK, said hams in Tazewell County volunteered to help out in any way they could, but there was no formal ARES activation. Amateurs also were reported to have activated informally in Lee, Wise, Washington and Russell counties.

Additional flooding occurred in West Virginia. West Virginia ARRL Section Emergency Coordinator Mac McMillian, W8XF, reported that several counties and the state EOC were put on standby, but no ARES/RACES activations were necessary. Up to three inches of rain fell March 20 in West Virginia, forcing 100 residents in at least three counties to leave their homes. Flooding also occurred this week in eastern Tennessee.

Editorial

Well, here we are, again. It seems difficult to imagine that two months have gone by since I last sat down with Microsoft Publisher. Big kudos go out this month, to Larry Ashburn, KE8VE. Larry has volunteered to produce the Zero Beat every other month, while I take a sorta-semi-vacation this year.

As I write this, a couple of nights after the Stark County Skywarn training session, I'm still amazed at the quality of the program. I hadn't been to a training session for a couple of years. Things have certainly changed for the better. With excellent use of presentation software, and LCD projectors, I got more out of this training session than any others that I'd attended.

Next on the Wednesday night agenda is the big Super Meeting which is being hosted by our friends at the Canton ARC. If you are reading this via snail-mail, the super meeting will be ancient history. If, however, you are reading this via the web, I hope to see you there. It promises to be a great evening. The speaker will be our Section Manager, Joe Phillips, K8QOE.

Attendance is expected to be between 100 & 125, With representatives from nine Stark County area clubs slated to attend. This promises to be a great event. I believe the organizers deserve a big pat on the back.

Well, that's it for now. See you in two months. Ok, Larry; Tag, you're it.

73, de John, KD8MQ
